'Offside!'

Developing appropriate teenage relationships

'Offside!' is a newly developed resource material, comprising a video and accompanying workbook.

The aim of the resource is to educate young people as to aspects of appropriate teenage relationships and, in addition, seek to challenge adversarial sexual beliefs that can be associated with concerning or harmful sexual behaviour in young people.

The video comprises a 15 minute drama depicting positive and negative examples of young people's behaviour in pursuit of relationships. The associated workbook comprises individual and group exercises and discussions on themes raised in the video. As such, the resource can be used in individual or group settings. Young people, via such exercises and discussion, are encouraged to examine issues relating to the formation of positive and healthy relationships and how age/power differences can affect relationships. In addition, young people are asked to explore consent in relationships, issues of discrimination and sexuality. Victim impact issues associated with harmful sexual behaviour and the consequences for others involved are also highlighted.
